Northwestern Mutual®

The ambition of The Northwestern has been less to be large than safe; its aim is to rank first in benefits to policyowners rather than first in size. Valuing quality above quantity, it has preferred to secure its business under certain salutary restrictions and limitations rather than to write a much larger business at the possible sacrifice of those valuable points which have made The Northwestern pre-eminently the policyowner's Company.

This concert takes place on the land of the Lenape. We honor the Lenape and other Indigenous caretakers of these lands and waters, the elders who lived here before, the Indigenous today, and the generations to come.

Note From The Director

Hello, and welcome to our fifth annual accessible concert! It's such an honor to curate an event that not only exposes individuals to Musical Theatre but also creates theatrical experiences for those for whom accessing the theatre may no longer be possible. Last year, we presented 'Carousel: A Concert' with a 31-piece orchestra and 23 vocalists.

As a Musical Theatre professional and Historian, it has always been my responsibility and commitment to the public not just to provide free, accessible theatre, but to educate the public on the history of theatre as well. Now more than ever, access to the arts is being threatened. There will always be those who fear what they cannot control. Whatever happens in this world will one day be reflected through the arts. When something is diminished, it comes back in force. When something is burned, new life sprouts from the ashes. You cannot erase something that will always prevail.

On Day 1 of rehearsal, our Associate Director, Leah Beth Etheredge, spoke to our cast about what she called 'The Spine' of the show. The Spine we have used for this production is belief, not as blind faith, but as the courage to trust in something more real than certainty: how love expands our understanding of what is possible in life. Brigadoon represents all that is good in life. More than that, it expresses a level of undiluted happiness (with the exception of Harry). As Mr. Lundie said, "There mus' be lots of folk out there who'd like a Brigadoon".

The arts are a safe space full of love, support, inspiration, and the ability to say anything while sharing a story. The arts belong to us all, and they're not going anywhere.

The arts are our Brigadoon.

Jarrett Winters Morley

ACT I

New Yorkers Tommy Albright and Jeff Douglas have travelled to the Scottish Highlands on a game-hunting vacation, but they get lost on their first night out. They begin to hear music ("Brigadoon") coming from a nearby village that does not appear on their map of the area. They find a fair in progress ("McConnachy Square"), with villagers dressed in traditional Scottish tartan. Andrew MacLaren and his daughters arrive at the fair to purchase supplies for his younger daughter Jean's wedding to Charlie Dalrymple. Archie Beaton's son Harry is madly loves Jean and is depressed at the thought of her marrying another. One of the girls asks Jean's older sister Fiona, when she'll marry, and Fiona answers she's waiting for the right person ("Waitin' for My Dearie").

Fiona invites the wanderers to have a meal and rest at the MacLaren home. Dairymaid Meg Brockie immediately falls for Jeff and leads him off. Charlie Dalrymple appears, shares a drink with Tommy, and toasts to a Mr. Forsythe whom he thanks for "postponing the miracle". When Tommy asks what that means, Fiona shushes him and leads him away as Charlie celebrates the end of his bachelorhood ("Go Home with Bonnie Jean"). Tommy tells Fiona that he has a fiancée, Jane, in New York, but he's in no hurry to marry her. Tommy insists on accompanying Fiona to gather heather for the wedding ("The Heather on the Hill"). Meanwhile, Meg takes Jeff to a place in the forest. She tells him she's "highly attracted" to him, but he spurns her advances, wanting only to sleep. She reflects on her "eventful" love life ("The Love of My Life").

At the MacLarens', Charlie arrives to sign the MacLarens' family Bible. He wants to see Jean; told that it's bad luck to see her on the wedding day, he begs for her to come out anyway ("Come to Me, Bend to Me"). Tommy and Fiona return with a basket full of heather, and Fiona goes upstairs to help Jean dress for the wedding. Jeff finds that Tommy is so happy that he can barely contain it ("Almost Like Being in Love"). Tommy notices that all the events listed in the family Bible, including Jean's wedding, are listed as if they had happened 200 years earlier. When he asks Fiona about this, she sends him to the schoolmaster, Mr. Lundie.

Mr. Lundie relates a story that the two New Yorkers can hardly believe: to protect Brigadoon from being changed by the outside world, 200 years ago, the local minister prayed to God to have Brigadoon disappear, only to reappear for one day every 100 years. All citizens of Brigadoon are forbidden to leave the town, or it will disappear forever. Tommy asks hypothetically if an outsider could be permitted to stay. Mr. Lundie replies, "A stranger can stay if he loves someone here – not jus' Brigadoon, mind ye, but someone in Brigadoon – enough to want to give up everythin' an' stay with that one person. Which is how it should be. 'Cause after all, lad, if ye love someone deeply, anythin' is possible."

The group leaves to go to the wedding. Mr. Lundie marries Charlie and Jean, and they perform a traditional celebratory wedding dance. Sword dancers appear, led by Harry, and they perform an elaborate dance over their weapons. The dance abruptly halts when Jean screams as Harry tries to kiss her. In anguish, he announces that he's leaving the town (which would end the miracle, and sprints away.

ACT II

The men of the town, including Tommy and a reluctant Jeff, frantically try to find Harry before he can depart the town ("The Chase").

Suddenly an agonized scream is heard. Harry, who appears to have fallen on a rock and crushed his skull, is found dead by the other men. Deciding not to tell the rest of the town until the next morning, the men carry Harry's body away. Fiona and her father arrive to see if everything is all right. As Mr. MacLaren leaves, Tommy sees Fiona, and they embrace. She reveals her love for him, and he tells her he believes he feels the same way ("There But For You Go I"). Fiona reminds him that the end of the day is near, and Tommy tells her he wants to stay in Brigadoon with her. They go to find Mr. Lundie.

Meanwhile, in the village, Meg tells about the day her parents were drunkenly married ("My Mother's Wedding Day"), and the townsfolk dance until the sound of Highland pipes pierces the air. The gaiety is interrupted as Archie Beaton enters carrying Harry's body, led by the pipers playing a lament. The men of Brigadoon help Archie carry his son to the burial place.

Tommy finds Jeff and announces his intention to stay. Jeff thinks the idea is absurd and argues with Tommy until he has convinced him that Brigadoon is only a dream. Fiona and Mr. Lundie arrive, and Tommy, shaken by Jeff's confession, tells Fiona that he loves her, but he can't stay; he still has doubts ("From This Day On"). Fiona tells Tommy, as she fades away into darkness, that she will love him forever.

Four months later, Jeff is drinking heavily at a hotel bar in New York.

Tommy, who has been living on a farm in New Hampshire, is still in love with Fiona and cannot stop thinking about her. His fiancée Jane Ashton, a beautiful socialite, talks to him about their impending wedding, but everything she says causes him to hear Fiona's voice and dream of Brigadoon ("Come to Me, Bend to Me" (reprise) and "Heather on the Hill" (reprise)). Tommy tells Jane that he cannot marry her, and she argues with him, but he continues to daydream about his true love ("Go Home With Bonnie Jean" (reprise) and "From This Day On" (reprise)). Jane leaves, and Tommy calls Jeff to say that he wants to return to Scotland, although he knows the village will not be there.

The pair return to the spot where they found Brigadoon and, as they expected, see nothing there. Just as they turn to leave, they hear the music again ("Brigadoon"), and Mr. Lundie appears and says, "My my! You must really love her. You woke me up!" Tommy waves goodbye to Jeff and disappears with Mr. Lundie into the Highland mist to be reunited with Fiona.

GALLERY 60 PLAYERS

2026-27 SEASON CELEBRATING 60 YEARS

Gallery Players has provided Brooklyn audiences with professional-quality theater since 1967. Beloved on both sides of the Brooklyn Bridge, Gallery is dedicated to producing classic and contemporary plays and musicals as well as premiering new works. Recipient of the Off-Off Broadway Review's 2000 Award for Lifetime Achievement, the 2013 Leonard da Vinci Award from the Beaux Arts Society, and the New York Innovative Theatre Awards for outstanding musical for Spring Awakening (2019), Like You Like It (2009), Yank! (2008), and Urinetown (2007).

Gallery Players' seasons are comprised of plays and musicals, covering a remarkably wide range of dramatic and comedic styles; the annual Black Box New Play Festival, which gives premiere performances of new works by playwrights; Have you Heard?, a unique play reading series; Overtures: a new musical reading series; and Players Shakespeare, and intensive workshopped class focusing on the works of William Shakespeare.

Gallery's reputation, critical acclaim, and popularity among audiences and artists puts it in an enviable position among its volunteer-only and Off-Off Broadway comparables. Its eclectic programming of intimate revivals and ambitious new work in inventive productions has earned it the reputation of "New York's Best Kept Secret." Among its famous alumni are founding member Harvey Fierstein; Broadway regulars Nancy Anderson, Jeffry Denman, and Deidre Goodwin; New York theater personality Seth Rudetsky; and many others.

Season 60 is a season built for everyone: lovers of classic drama, Broadway fans, comedy seekers, families, and audiences hungry for something brand new. Big emotions. Big laughter. Big questions. One unforgettable year of theatre.
